Mrs. Duffney Found Guilty of Unlawful Manufacture of Alcoholic Beverages

BROTHER IS ACQUITTED

Convict Meltzer and Glickstein, Conspiracy to Manufacture Liquids

DOYLESTOWN, May 29—Mrs. Mildred Olive Duffney, Newport Road, Bristol Township, was convicted in Bucks County court, yesterday on a charge of unlawful manufacture of alcohol and alcoholic liquids. The jury in the case, which was heard before Judge Calvin S. Boyer, deliberated one hour.

Mrs. Duffney, 45, who stated that she operated a convalescent home on her 10 acre place, known as "Owl Farm," testified that she rented her barn to a man named Charles Pearson, address unknown, to raise mushrooms.

Counsel for Mrs. Duffney, Hugh B. Eastburn, made a motion for a new trial. Mrs. Duffney was released in bail, the amount of $1000 bail being doubled.

The raid on the Duffney farm was conducted by liquor control board agents on March 23rd. Mrs. Duffney denied that a 500-gallon still was operated in the barn 250 feet from her home.

Charles G. Duffney, who stated he lived with his sister, was acquitted on a similar charge. Upon direction of the court the costs were placed on the county. Mrs. Duffney informed the court she served as a nurse and companion for a Philadelphia judge.

The first witness for the Commonwealth was M. R. Myers, Liquor Control Board agent, who with six or seven other officers, raided the farm of Mildred O. Duffney on the Newportville road, near Bristol, and found a still not in operation, however.

An elaborate still had been set up in the barn, which was padlocked, but later entered by the raiding squad and a jug of beer which has an alcoholic

OFFICERS ORDERED TO MAKE WAR ON SPEEDERS

Morrisville Council Issues The Edict; Desires to Make Streets Safe

WATCH "STOP" SIGNS

MORRISVILLE, May 29—Morrisville borough council has issued orders to Morrisville police officers to start a drive against speeders and those who indulge in reckless driving. This action was taken after considerable complaint about the dangerous speed of many motorists on the borough streets.

The drive will also be against those who disregard the stop signs and other traffic rulers, the violation of which endangers the lives of pedestrians and other motorists. The police will not be stationed at one place in the borough, but will work in all districts. In some sections the early hours of the morning will be selected for the drive, while in other districts the drive will be in the afternoons or evenings.

Additional signs will be erected to warn motorists that the traffic laws will be strictly enforced.

Councilman Paul Nichols, president of Common Council, urged action against reckless drivers and speeders. He said it is not safe at times for pedestrians to cross streets.

Because of a condition on North Delmor avenue where the water backs up on the property of several homes, believed to have been caused by the building of the new roadway there by the State Highway Department, Council instructed the borough engineer to check the grade of the new road in front of the property to ascertain whether the contractor built it according to the grade approved by Council.

Bids for oil to be placed on the streets were opened last night. The award for 6,000 gallons was made to the Barrett Paving Company, of Trenton, at .0625 a gallon, applied on the streets as needed.

Council has voted to place an inch pipe to supply water to the Gorsky property on West Hendrickson avenue.

Compliments were showered upon the Misses Sara and Gladys Granzow, at the conclusion of the performance, in which dozens of boys, girls and others, of more mature age participated. The costumes, most attractive for the many numbers; the lighting effects in charge of R. C. Granzow; and the musical accompaniment by Blanche Washburn, all came in for a share of fine commendation.

Each and every dance pupil well executed his and her part in the program. Eagerly did the large audience watch the intricate steps, beautified further by means of brilliant lighting, and snappy and colorful costumes in keeping with the particular numbers.

COMPLETING PROGRAM FOR HORSE SHOW HERE

Bristol Riding Club to Stage Annual Event on June 5th and 6th

EXPECT MANY ENTRIES

The president of the Bristol Riding Club reports that this organization is arranging for another horse show on Saturday afternoon, June 5, and Sunday afternoon, June 6.

The committee representing the club is making active and elaborate preparations to make this event more pleasant and spectacular than any previous show has been. Longer and more varied courses have been added which will give the observer better opportunity to view the performances of the horses, and at the same time give the riders an equal opportunity to demonstrate their skill. This will undoubtedly add zest and thrill to the occasion. This in itself will lead many of the townspeople and their families to Laing's Estate, where the show will be staged, for the pleasure and enjoyment that will be derived from seeing the show.

The club, as heretofore, is receiving acceptances from many outside clubs and horse owners who will participate, assuring friends who come as spectators ample competition and fine horsemanship in winning the trophies that are being offered.

RETIREES AS MAIL CARRIER AFTER 31 YEARS' SERVICE

J. Milnor King Delivered Mail On R. D. Route No. 1 Since It Was Established

1265 PIECES DAILY

Route Now Covers 37 Miles Each Day, He Says

J. MILNOR KING

For 31 long years J. Milnor King has traversed R. F. D. Route No. 1, out of the Bristol post office, carrying messages of joy and gladness as well as those which took grief and sadness to the recipients. Today Mr. King makes his last deliveries and then goes on the pension list of the post office department.

There are hundreds of people who know J. Milnor King, not only on R. F. D. Route No. 1, but elsewhere in this vicinity as well. There are many on R. F. D. No. 1 who will miss seeing him as he has made his rounds daily for 31 years, never missing a day because of illness.

The R. F. D. Route out of the Bristol post office was established on June 1, 1906, after petitions had been circulated by Mr. King's father, S. Headley King, and George B. Wislar, both now deceased. These two men saw the desirability of having the mail delivered daily and petitioned the post office department to establish such a route out of the Bristol office. Elwood W. Minster was then postmaster here. The petition was filed, an inspector sent here to go over the proposed route and finally it was approved. Mr. King was named the first carrier, and has continued to serve in that capacity ever since.

Mr. King began making deliveries using a horse and buggy, and on the first day he carried six pieces of mail. In making his deliveries Mr. King traversed 23 miles daily at first, but gradually the route was extended and during the first 10 years Mr. King wore out five horses.

In 1915 in order to keep pace with the extended demands made upon him, both as to the distance to be covered and the amount of mail to be carried, Mr. King put aside his "horse and buggy days" and adopted the automobile. He has worn out five automobiles and just this week the machine which he was using began to show signs of weakening and the speedometer refused to register any further mileage. Mr. King says that his present car has traveled 103,000 miles and that all but about 500 of this has been over Route No. 1. The route now covers 37 miles daily with a daily average of 1265 pieces of mail delivered.

"Several times in years past I was unable to cover the entire route in one day due to the roads being blocked by snow," says Mr. King. "I always carried a shovel with me during the winter season and time after time dug myself out of drifts, have driven over fields in an attempt to get the mail through. I have been pulled out of the snow and many times would not reach my home until nine o'clock at night, after being blocked for hours in snow drifts. When I would drive in at home with a team of horses to my buggy the wheels would be clogged with snow and ice." Once during a period when his home was quarantined for scarlet fever, he boarded with a neighbor so as to keep the mail moving.

There are now 470 boxes on Route 1 and the mail man covers the route every day. Several times in years gone by there were times when Mr. King could not get over the entire route for a week due to the condition of the roads.

"Yes, I have delivered all kinds of mail matter," says Mr. King. Since the inauguration of parcel post the contents has greatly increased and changed. "I have never had an accident and I have never lost a day due to illness," was the astounding statement made by Mr. King, who on Saturday will make his last trip over Route 1, not altogether sure whether he is glad or sorry. "I don't know," truthfully stated Mr. King as he sat

MEMORIAL DAY

Memorial Day, which is to be observed Monday, was instituted in honor of the young boys and the men who left their fathers' homes or their own families and died wearing the blue of the Union Army. Only a pitiful few of their comrades, heavily laden with years, survive them.

With the passing of time it has come to be a day of tribute to the dead of all wars, and in every family of remembrance of all the loved ones who have passed from the mystery of life into the mystery of death.

Soon, within two or three years, the soldiers of the North and the South will be gone, and after them the soldiers of the Spanish-American War will disappear, to be claimed by eternity, and then the ghostly throng whose members perished in the Argonne or some other forest or field in France will be supplemented by new recruits.

In the light of history, the few years that one man may live longer than another are a small thing. But individually and collectively we have a part to play in preventing in the world some new armed holocaust that would cut off thousands of millions of men before their allotted span.

This objective, world peace, is a beckoning and compelling ideal. But they who achieve that ideal, assuming that some bright day it may be achieved, will prove unworthy of a heritage of honor left them by those who left their bodies on a field of battle, won or lost, if they forget these sacrifices.

World peace is a bright and alluring goal, but unfortunate indeed will be that nation that no longer breeds patriots, men and women who love their country with such ardor and fidelity that they are willing to give the best they have, even life itself, that great principles may survive.

WILL SCOURGE RETURN?

Will large sections of the West again be scorched by a drought and devastation this summer? Senator Nye, of North Dakota, thinks so. In fact, Senator Nye told Secretary of Agriculture Wallace the other day that the need for relief of drought-stricken farmers this summer would be greater than ever, and suggested a Federal appropriation of $1,000, 000,000.

While Secretary Wallace did not believe the present drought area was as widespread as a year ago, and that any such sum as $1,000,000,000 would be needed for relief, he admitted the drought was more intense in a smaller section of the plains states.

For almost a month there has been no rain in half a dozen plains states. This is ominous coming so early in the season. Should the drought continue for several more weeks crops will be ruined and the devastation will be more complete than in recent years.

Farmers who have been holding on mainly through meager Federal relief and mortgage moratoriums are about through. Another crop catastrophe coming on the heels of those of the last five years will be well nigh fatal to all their hopes.

"Worry makes you roll over and wear out the bed-clothes," says an Indiana ancient who preached his own funeral oration. Abe Martin could have used that.

Even under the pari-mutuel system, a better on either entry in Spain can kiss the $2 goodby.

Recognizing the fact that the local club has been responsible for the staging of successful affairs in the past, horse exhibitors from all over the State and New Jersey have sent entry forms requesting positions in the various classes.

The program for this year, the largest ever attempted by the Bristol Ridding Club, will have 33 different classes, which includes, saddle, jumping, work horse, and hunter events, and also an eight furlong steeplechase race with many of the leading show horses in this section of the country entered.

The show grounds on the Laing Estate are more attractive this year than ever. The center ring has been graded and sodded until it has reached perfect condition; likewise the two outside courses with their natural hazards are in fine shape.

Prizes for the different classes are the finest ever offered and are on display in Fabian's drug store window at Mulberry and Radcliffe streets, together with the ribbons, and include valuable cups, plaques, and other silver articles donated by many prominent citizens.

Among the trophy donors are included: Mrs. Helen R. Benson, W. A.
Seaver, Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, Henry Palmer, F. A.
Simons, C. Frank Donnelley, D. D.
O'Dell, Mrs. Fred Grupp, and N. A.
Vincent.

The show committee for the affair includes: Thomas Doran, C. Frank Donnelley, Hilda Wanamaker, Ann Hutchinson, Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing, Violet Hilgendorf, Horace Daniels, Carl Schilling, Mrs. Fred Grupp, Dorothy Snyder, Marianna Mahner, Douglas Chilton, Anna Archer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hanford, and Marty Green.

Retires As Mail Carrier
After 31 Years' Service

In the comfortable living room of his home the other evening after having a hard day. "The mail was heavy today," said Mr. King, "and I am tired.
But I don't know—"

Baby chicks and baby alligators are some of the live-stock which from time to time Mr. King has delivered.

"The work has been pleasant and I have liked it. Many have been kind to me. Often have I received little gifts of appreciation such as vegetables and things which the farmers on my route have given me. These I appreciate."

Mr. King was asked what he is going to do now and his reply is "I don't know."

"It might be that on his first day off he might drive over Route 1, like the trolley conductor who went trolley riding during his vacation.

In a statistical way, it is figured that Mr. King has traveled 333,095 miles during the 31 years that he has covered Route 1. In addition during 20 years that Mr. King delivered mail he lived three miles from the post office, which made him travel 36,840 miles going to and returning from his place of employment.

So today when he completes covering Route 1 the biggest job which J.
Minor King will face will be how to spend his spare time.

"Rich Girl-Poor Girl" by FAITH BALDWIN

CHAPTER XXII

Rose said hastily,
"What about the school job?"

She smiled a little as she said it.
Jonathan found himself awkward under that smile. He replied testily.

"Oh, routine stuff, of course. I suppose you knew it would be.
After all, the seasonal physical examinations took place long before the job came my way . . . there doesn't seem much to it. I consult with the school nurse, I make my reports. I assume that I'll look the boys over before track and baseball season."

Rose said, after a moment, "In other towns, bigger ones than this, of course, yet not very large at that, it's a full time job. Their men go between the various schools, maintain an office and have no outside practice. But here, to be frank, it's always been more or less of a sinecure. Still, she went on earnestly, "there are things you could do, Jon . . . new things . . . new, that is, to Riverport."

He looked away uncomfortably.
After a minute, he said, "I've tried, Rose. I wanted to give a series of talks, hygiene, sex education . . . tempered, of course, to the ages . . . one for the older children in the grade schools, another for the high school classes. I buzzed around and saw people—and was told to lay off. I was told they get all they need in the regular way in their courses and that the parents would object seriously to a more detailed, more adult exposition. . . . So that's that. It simply can't be done, not in Riverport at any rate."

"No," agreed Rose. "I don't suppose it can."

He didn't exactly like her tone.
Her tone said: You have the job, if you want to you can force the issue. You can call a meeting of the School Board and put your views to them forcibly. You can make them see. . . .

He argued, "I've talked to Sutton.
He deplores the narrow-minded attitude of the Board and the parents and many of the teachers. And I must agree with him that there's nothing to be done at present.
Maybe we can bring 'em to it by education."

Rose said slowly, "Of course if you've talked with Sutton, there's no more to be said."

"Oh, Rose," cried Jonathan, in real despair and sickening suddenly at the very name, the name which kept cropping up to ruin all their friendly conversations, their sense of congenial companionship. "Please don't let's quarrel. . . . If it weren't for you," he added, "I couldn't stick it out here, I'd be so desperately lonely!"

She smiled at him, then. She said gently, "I'm glad you feel that way about me, Jon."

"Rose," he said, after a minute,
"I haven't the least right to ask you this, but are you engaged to Bill Lynd?"

"No," replied Rose steadily, "I'm not. I'm not engaged to anyone."

She got to her feet and went toward the door. She said, over her shoulder, "And I don't want to be."

At the door, she called her mother . . . She asked, "How about those doughnuts?" and Mrs. Ward appeared almost instantly, with a heaped plate of fresh fried doughnuts and a pot of coffee. "You get the cups," she told Rose, as Jonathan came forward to relieve her of her pleasant burden.

He thought, well, she warned me, well enough; keep off dangerous ground. She could have let the doughnuts wait a moment!

After he had gone home Rose went upstairs to bed. Her mother fussed around putting things away, straightening up the room. Presently she would come to Rose's bedroom and put her through the usual maternal cross-examination which, however subtly presented, never failed to be forthcoming at the end of an evening during which Rose had had a caller. For a few minutes however Rose would be alone and free to think her own thoughts. She sat down at the dressing table, put her chin in her cupped hands and regarded her reflection. She said to herself, He isn't in love with Sally. Not yet.

He's dazzled, that's all, poor infant.
He isn't in love with me. Not yet.
He's just lonely. But—

Her mother coming upstairs a few minutes later was astonished to hear her child declaim in a loud firm tone of voice, "I could, of course, fight her with her own weapons. That's what they tell you to do. But I'd hate it somehow—if he doesn't really care—"

"What on earth?" asked Mrs.
Ward, entering the room.

Rose turned scarlet. She said, and laughed at herself, "Oh, nothing. Did you think I'd lost my mind? I was just—just reading."

Mrs. Ward was no longer interested. It didn't occur to her to ask the name of the book or to look for the volume itself. And Rose, her color subsiding once more breathed freely. That was, she told herself severely, one of the narrowest escapes she had ever experienced.

Spring comes slowly to the North.
It is a true transition. It is not in the least the spring of more southerly climates, a falling in love at first sight, an alteration over night.
It is more like the love which follows friendship, which waits, which weighs, shy, a little reluctant, a little cool, but how magnificent when it comes.

In May the roads were still rutted, and back of the camps along the river's edge ice was in the gullies. But the sky was a flawless blue and the brooks and streams were swollen with the fresh runnings of water.

Jonathan's own garden began to show its first color. He knew next to nothing about gardens. It was Rose who came along after school and raked and pruned and tidied.
Often he would not see her except to wave through the windows and to look out from his office now and then when a patient permitted, to see her, her gloved hands sternly wielding shears, a silly little tam partly covering her bright hair, a consciously shabby skirt and sweater adorning her slender figure.

Sally had been away for a time.
She did not return to Riverport until early in June. One night, after dinner in the house on the Hill, she had suddenly announced that she was bored, that she could scream with boredom and that it was indicated that she take a trip to New York and buy some clothes.
She added firmly, "Lots of clothes what's your favorite color, Kim?"

"Color?" repeated Jonathan vaguely, "Oh, I dunno. Any color as long as it's blue—or pink," he added.

Sally laughed.
"Marvelous imagination!" She stopped laughing. Her pencilled, delicate eyebrows drew together.
She said abruptly, "I've had an invitation to cruise during the summer . . . why I haven't accepted it I can't fathom. It must be love."

She grinned at him impishly. After a while she said, "Well, it won't be so bad. We can have our fun. The Country Club, the island; I hope you're in trim for a terrifically social summer."

The next day she had left town.
Jonathan missed her, but not too much. He was fairly busy, he was up to his ears in a row with the athletic director at the high school.
Examining the track and baseball candidates, he had discerned a cardiac weakness in their best track man, a lanky, nervous, long-legged boy who had done a good deal during the past two years to keep up the Riverport record at the interscholastic meets.

The athletic director had told him flatly that he was an alarmist.
And going over his head, had called the boy's family physician. That old gentleman, a quiet, pleasant, doddering person, had shaken his head gravely at the upstart of a colleague. He couldn't, he said, agree at all. To be sure, Pete was growing rapidly—he came of a family of six footers. But there was nothing wrong with him, nothing at all.
A little overtrained, perhaps, and growing pains.

"There are no such things as growing pains!" said Jonathan, annoyed.

In the end he went to the boy's parents. And Pete was withdrawn from active athletics. The coolness emanating from the athletic director, Pete's doctor and other interested people became perfectly apparent to Jonathan. He spoke of it to Senator Sutton when that gentleman stopped in to take him up to the Club for a golf match one afternoon.

Sutton shook his head, too. He said, "I'm on your side, of course, Jonathan—can't have that contre-temps repeated, you know—"

Contritemps, thought Jonathan,

ASHBY HANDS FIRST DEFEAT TO HIBERNIANS

Turner Ashby and the Odd Fellows handed the Hibernians their first defeat of the season on the Edgely diamond last night. The Oddies scored most of their runs in the first two frames to set back the Hibos. Final result was: Odd Fellows, 9; Hibernians, 4.

By virtue of the triumph, the Oddies are now but one half game away from the league-leaders which happen to be the Hibernians and the Odd Fellows. St. Ann's rest one-half game away from the Odd Fellows for third place.

In the match, the Corson Street clan outthit the Radcliffe Street boys, eleven to nine, but Ashby backed by good support was invincible in the pinches. He had a bad start when he was rapped for three doubles and two singles in the initial canto and then finished bad by allowing two singles and a double in the sixth.

"Henny" Morgan was on the mound at the start for the Hibbs but fanned in the second round when he was socked for five tallies. At the beginning of the third, Camel Breslin was shooting them in and he finished, Breslin allowed three bingles while Morgan was solved for three two-baggers and two singles besides walking two batters.

"Jimmy" Cooper was the leading sticker for the winners, connecting for two doubles and a single in four tries. Ashby's nemesis was "Eddie" Sullivan who nipped him for three singles.

ROHM & HAAS NINE TUMBLES INTO CELLAR

Although outthit, nine to five, the St. Ann's A. A. bunched their hits in the first inning to compile five runs which was enough to send the Rohm and Haas nine tumbling into the cellar of the Bristol Twilight League. Final score stood 6-2.

Wildness on the part of Art Fuoco enabled the Saints to place the runners on the bag. Fuoco did not finish the inning, in fact he did not retire a batter, before Manager David rushed in Andy Pfaffenrath. After the shaky first, Pfaffenrath settled down and in the final four frames allowed but two hits. The run scored off him in the fifth was the result of an error by Oppman.

LANDRETH NINE WILL HAVE BUSY WEEK-END

The Landreth Seeds baseball nine will face a busy week-end and also play Monday afternoon. Today the nine plays Wissinoming on the latter's field. Tomorrow, Scanlon Catholic Club, of the Philadelphia League, will come to Landreth's field, and Monday afternoon the localites will go to Collingswood.

Manager Landreth is undecided as to what hurlers he will use in the different fray but is almost certain that "Dutch" Henry, Turner Ashby and Howard Black will work. Black did well against the House of David and will be set to go against Collingswood. Ashby may get the home game against Scanlon tomorrow with Henry working this afternoon.

The rest of the line-up will see Jack Broderick behind the plate, Eddie Sullivan at first, Eddie Liberatore, second, "Eddie" DeBoskey, short, and "Gige"

BOOK 10 THRILLING BOUTS ON ST. ANN'S ARENA CARD

Amateur boxing fans of this vicinity have a treat in store for them Monday night when the St. Ann's Athletic Association conducts another of its weekly shows. Ten bouts will be held in the outdoor arena, Wood and Franklin streets. All are under the supervision of the Middle Atlantic District of the A. A. U.

Match-Maker Sammy Moffo announced the complete card last night and each will be a thriller from start to finish. Most of the fighters on the card are known in this section, having fought in either the St. Ann's Arena or at Croydon.

Moffo has secured a bout for Al Paris who will make his 1937 debut. His foe is Michael DeStefano, Pen-Mar. Paris fought for St. Ann's two seasons ago and at the start made a fine climb up the ladder but gradually he hit a losing streak and this disheartened him. Now he is back again with plenty of confidence and expects to start the 1937 season with a win.

"Hokey" Leighton, Rescue Squad, who dropped a close one to Jimmy Lefterts last week, is booked to fight "Sammy" Piazza, Sun Village, Chester, in one of the bouts. Leighton trained hard for this bout and corrected quite a few of his faults of last week. The fact that the local boy did plenty of fouling and holding cost him the Lefterts fight.

Vince Della, fresh from a win over Happy Riddle, will have his hands full in meeting Benny Arrizzi, Seymour. Arrizzi finished among the top-notchers in a recent tournament in Philadelphia. Tally Sciarra will meet Herman Matteo, Seymour. This should be a whale of a fight as Matteo has a good left jab but is a target for a right which is Tally's favorite punch. If the St. Ann's fighter can get in that right enough he will add a victory to his side of the ledger.

"Sammy" Sindora, Trenton youth who is fighting for St. Ann's, will make his debut in meeting an old-timer in the amateur ranks in John Giordano, Seymour. This is a 145-pound class fight and should be interesting from the beginning. Nelson Canty, Wharton, and Sylvester Purnell, St. Ann's, have been rematched, and this should be a repetition of the fight these colored 155-pounders put up in their first meeting.

James "Jack Rabbit" Nunn, another Bristolian, will also make his debut, meeting Frankie Brown from the Wharton Club. The fans who have seen Nunn train are wondering whether he will get serious enough to beat Brown as the localite has the tendency to be very amusing and forget his fighting.

In the three other bouts, "Happy" Riddle, Sun Village, meets a tough opponent in Billy Crawford, Daggert, Joe Amico, Pen-Mar, faces Orlando Spino, Seymour; and in the other, Michael O'Brien, unattached, tackles Francis McClay, Seymour.

First bout will begin at 8:30 o'clock, sharp. Reserve tickets are on sale at the St. Ann's club-house. Charles Aita is in charge of reservations.
